

ABSTRACT

An enbloc air conditioner comprising: a condenser unit crossed by a flow of air external to the room to be conditioned A between an inlet and an outlet; an evaporator unit crossed by a flow of air internal to the room to be conditioned A 5 between an intake and a delivery way. Both the units are arranged in a single container in which they are aligned one behind the other according to an axis parallel to the directions of inlet and outlet of the external air flow through the intake and the outlet of the condenser unit.